

Network for Good™
Simple. Smart. Fundraising Software.

The Ultimate Nonprofit Social Media Guide

Table of Contents

Social Media Benefits	4
Creating Your Social Media Presence	5
Building Your Network	7
Top Sites for Nonprofits	9
Facebook	10
Instagram	11
Twitter	12
LinkedIn and YouTube	13
Engaging with GenZ: TikTok and Snapchat	14
Social Advertising	18
Social Media Strategy Checklist	20

Network for Good™
Simple. Smart. Fundraising Software.

About Network for Good

Since 2001 Network for Good has been instrumental in helping tens of thousands of nonprofits cultivate donor relationships and advance their purpose with simple, smart fundraising software, personal fundraising coaching, and online resources. Network for Good provides nonprofits with a complete fundraising solution, reducing the need for disparate systems, saving organizations time, and enabling them to raise more funds to support their purpose.

“Life moves pretty fast. If you don’t stop and look around once in a while, you could miss it.”

– Ferris Bueller’s Day Off

There’s no denying it. Social media is the fastest-growing phenomenon of the modern age.

Since launching, both Facebook and Instagram have grown to over 2 billion users.

According to the Pew Research Center’s Social Media Fact Sheet, approximately 72% of Americans are on social media.

The impact of social media is both immediate and global. There is no faster or broader-reaching communication method. Major news breaks on social media. We celebrate, mourn, and follow revolutions as part of an online community. Alerts and notifications keep users informed and entertained in real-time.

From our social circles to professional networking to news, politics, and advocacy;

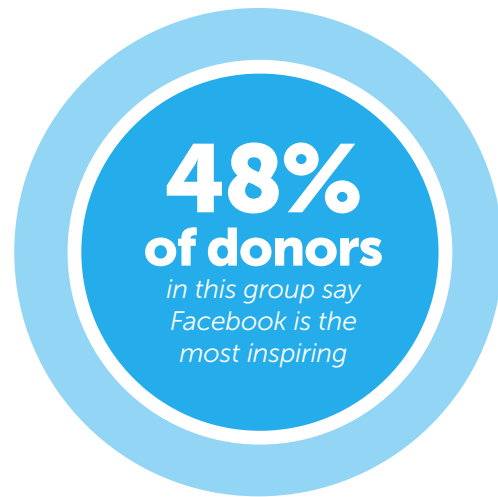

social media is a hub of activity that has become part of our daily lives. Most users are on social media every day; many check multiple times each day.

Whether you jumped on board back in the early days of Facebook, or are relatively new to these online communities, the advantages of social media are undeniable. No other method of communication is as effective at instantly putting your message in front of thousands of people.

How do you choose which platforms to be on?

This guide offers facts and insights about some of the top social media platforms, how to use them to your advantage, proven post ideas, and a social media strategy checklist.

Social Media Benefits

2020 Global Trends in Giving Report

Like every other aspect of nonprofit marketing and fundraising, the purpose of social media is to increase and deepen your relationships.

Social Media Helps Nonprofits

- Build trust within your community.
- Deepen your relationship with your audience.
- Expand your outreach and network.
- Promote your events.
- Drive people to your website.
- Add personality to your organization.
- Provide real-time engagement with your followers.

Your social media followers can do for your nonprofit what your personal networks do for you—applaud your successes, support you in times of need, spread the word about your projects and events, and encourage others to get involved. It is also a way to get instant feedback from your community, and respond to it in real time.

Creating Your Social Media Presence

Your Profile

Your profile is the first thing people see when they search for you on social media. Keep your name and profile picture consistent across platforms. That way, people who like you on Facebook can easily find you on other social media platforms. A best practice for your profile image is to use your nonprofit's logo. This image accompanies all of your posts, so it's a great way to build brand awareness.

- Set your location and add a website address.
- Add company info or a brief bio.
- Set your cover or header image. Update this image periodically to highlight events, programs, organizational news, or just for a change of pace.

What to Post

The old adage applies...content is king. Post content that drives engagement and conversation, and builds trust in your organization. From your purpose to programs and events, you have plenty of material to talk about at your disposal. Be personable, approachable, and fun. What is your organization's personality? How much do you enjoy coming to the office every day? Share that energy with your followers. Include images and videos in your content. Posts with video and images produce stronger engagement than text-only posts.

Shareable Content

- Fundraising campaigns (launches, status updates, fundraising events).
- Non-promotional (holiday party photos and videos, office pot-lucks, candid staff shots, new staff member introduction videos, trivia, opinion polls, contests).
- Press and announcements (grants and awards, organization mentions in the news, job postings).
- Events (community events, performances, panel discussions, town halls).
- Program updates (number of people served, new sponsor information, locations, and partners).
- Relevant external news (articles about your area of focus, blogs by experts in the field, community affairs).
- Donor and beneficiary stories of impact (a video discussing the impact your organization has made brings your purpose to life.)

Let your content lead. Stay active, but don't post just to post. Create a schedule that includes a regular posting cadence to ensure your organization stays in your followers' newsfeeds.

When to Post

When and how often to post throughout the day depends on your audience's schedule just as much as your content. Event announcements are more time-sensitive than trivia. Press, reviews, and interviews depend on when the news outlet is publishing the story. The perfect schedule will differ from organization to organization. The key is to find those times of day when your followers are online. Post at different times of day to discover when your followers are taking breaks. Catch them during their commutes to and from the office. Stay engaged with them in the early evening or after dinner.

- An easy-to-follow schedule is to post mid-morning, lunchtime, and late afternoon/early evening.
- Stick to a routine and test it out over time to see what kind of response you receive.
- Once you have a baseline, try out different times of day to see when you get the most engagement.
- Keep in mind, posting cadence will depend on the platform you're using. For example, you should post on Twitter several times per day. For other platforms like Facebook and Instagram, you'll want to stick to about one post per day.

Measuring Success

Like any other marketing or fundraising effort, your success on social media will be determined by your goals. It's exciting to watch your number of followers increase, but if they're not engaging with your content, you won't stay in their newsfeed for long. It's crucial to measure success by both quantity and quality. As your numbers grow, are you also seeing a rise in comments and engagement with posts? Are you capturing more email addresses for your e-newsletter? Are other people and accounts tagging your organization?

Insights & Analytics

Use your social media channel's individual insights and analytics tools to track how posts are performing, and get a sense of what is working and what is not. You can learn so much about your audience through these insights. Think of it as your very own Nielsen rating system. Through this data, you can:

- View overall likes, shares, retweets, and comments.
- Learn how, where, and when people are interacting with your posts.
- Measure retention over time.
- View demographics of your followers.
- Segment your audience to target posts.
- View the reach and amount of engagement of individual posts.
- Find influencers in your network.

Use this data to your advantage. Create content that matches your followers' interests, test out your social media schedule for best results, and target like-minded individuals to grow your network.

Building Your Network

There's a pretty simple formula to building your social media network:
Presence + Relevancy + Conversation = Engaged Followers

Presence

It may seem obvious, but you can't build a social network if you're not, well, social. You have to be on the platforms where your audience (and prospects) frequent. Simply having an account isn't enough. Building a successful social media presence involves posting daily, sometimes multiple times per day. Your followers are checking in at events, posting photos, and sharing thoughts with their friends. Stay engaged with them and encourage participation. That includes weekends.

Relevancy

More and more people get their news from social media. Posting organizational content that's relevant to your work makes you a trusted source of information. What events do you have coming up? What programs are you currently running? What issues are you working on that are in the news? Relevant, engaging content is all around you. Post photos and videos of your work in the field and at community events, link to blog posts, share program updates, and build awareness of your cause.

Conversation

After you post your content, stick around to see who's responding. Check back during the day to reply to comments and post new content. Using a casual (but professional) tone will invite your followers into your online community, and encourage them to engage with your content. Participate in the latest social media trend to engage with your audience in a new and exciting way. Share trivia, run a contest, post opinion polls, and get to know your followers. Don't shy away from negative feedback. Listen to what they say, post that you'll private message them, and then make the conversation a one-on-one. That negative comment could teach you something and help you improve your community relations in the end.

Pro tip: Posting regularly on one to three platforms and building an engaged audience is better than infrequently posting on all social media platforms. Do your research and create accounts on the platforms that make the most sense for your organization's goals.

For example, if your nonprofit primarily serves youth, TikTok or Snapchat might be great platforms to cultivate because your audience is more active there. If your nonprofit serves an older population, it may make more sense to focus on Facebook. Allocate your resources accordingly.

Build Engagement on Social Media

Follow these top dos and don'ts to build engagement.

Do

...include both a link and an image or video to garner more likes, comments, shares, and click-throughs.

...post a variety of content on all channels: blog posts, photos, videos. Mix up your media and content—tell a story, ask for donations, promote your Network for Good event page, etc.

...engage with your followers. Answer questions. Respond to feedback. Wish donors a happy birthday. Thank volunteers by name. We all love to be acknowledged, and we often share those posts with friends.

...focus on one to three platforms—and test everything. Keep it simple. Facebook and Instagram are great places to start. Post different types of content to see what gets the most likes, shares, retweets, and comments. Learn where your audiences are and optimize your content for each platform. Once you have a handle on your core three, branch out into other platforms like TikTok, LinkedIn or YouTube to diversify your content.

Don't

...include just a link in your posts. When sharing a link, make sure a photo auto-populates from that webpage, or post an image or video of your own.

...post the same type of content over and over again. Variety is the spice of life, and that goes double for social media.

...use stock images and videos. These don't need to be professionally taken; they just need to be interesting. Gather media from events or in the field, and develop a good library you can use with various types of content.

...ignore comments and tweets. It's not called "social" media for nothing. Reply to your followers.

...delete negative comments, unless clearly offensive or inappropriate. Reply to your follower, address their concern, and clear up the issue. You'll win points for professionalism and empathy!

The Ultimate Do:

Above all, make sure every post is shareable, engaging, and unique.

Top Social Media Sites

Social media is an ever-changing medium. The number of platforms to choose from is rapidly increasing, and each has its own personality. Understanding who your audience is and what content works on each platform will allow you to harness the popularity of these various sites, increase the success of your organization, and maximize the good you do in the community. We've chosen some of the top platforms for an overview of the best spots to spend your time.

Social Media Use Demographics

% of U.S. adults who say they use...

	 Facebook	 Twitter	 Instagram	 LinkedIn	 YouTube	 TikTok	 Snapchat
Total	69%	23%	40%	28%	81%	21%	25%
Men	61%	25%	36%	31%	82%	17%	22%
Women	77%	22%	44%	26%	80%	24%	28%
Ages 18–29	70%	42%	71%	30%	95%	48%	65%
30–49	77%	27%	48%	36%	91%	22%	24%
50–64	73%	18%	29%	33%	83%	14%	12%
65+	50%	7%	13%	11%	49%	4%	2%
White	67%	22%	35%	29%	79%	18%	23%
Black	74%	29%	49%	27%	84%	30%	26%
Hispanic	72%	23%	52%	19%	85%	31%	31%

Pew Research Center "Social Media Use in 2021"

Facebook

Given the sheer number of people on Facebook, having a page and staying active is simply good business. Your Facebook page offers your followers real-time interaction with your organization. Next to your website, it's the best way to share information with the public. The more a user engages with your content or visits your Facebook page, the more your posts will appear in their newsfeed. The more your followers like, share, and comment on your posts, the higher chances you'll reach people who don't follow you.

Profile*

Launched in 2004.

2.91 billion active monthly users.

1.93 billion active daily users.

On average, Facebook users open the app at least eight times a day, with the average US user spending at least 38 minutes a day on the app.

Tips

- Posts with images and videos perform much better than text-only posts. Photos and videos of your work in the community create an immediate, emotional response for your followers.
- Share links to drive traffic to your website.
- Track which posts are performing well and create similar content.
- Promote your Facebook page on your website and in your e-newsletter.
- Promote your e-newsletter on Facebook to increase sign-ups.
- Pin important posts so they stay at the top of your page for the first thing people see.

Content

- Post a story from a recent e-newsletter and invite followers to join your email list.
- Share photos and videos from a program site and show your work in action.
- Share photos and videos of events and tag guests so the content appears in their family and friends' newsfeeds, too.
- Use Facebook's Nonprofit Page Fundraiser functionality to raise money for your organization.
- Post video of patron testimonials and let your community brag for you.
- Post positive reviews and press coverage.

Utilize Facebook and Instagram Fundraising Tools

As a nonprofit organization, you have a great opportunity to utilize free fundraising tools built into Facebook and Instagram. Plus, if you sign up to use Meta Pay donations made through the platforms are not subject to fees, so you receive 100% of the donation amount. Nonprofit organizations can set up fundraising pages, add donate buttons to their profiles, feature fundraising links on Facebook live, and more. Learn more about Facebook and Instagram Fundraising Tools.

*Sources: Facebook and Omnicores Agency

Instagram

One of the fastest-growing platforms, Instagram is the site where you can show the most personality.

Capture photos and short videos with your smartphone and upload them directly to the site. Stream live videos to your followers. Use the story feature to post photos, videos, and links that vanish after 24 hours. Use images to strengthen your fundraising campaigns. Donations increase when donors come face-to-face with the human impact their gift can have.

Profile*

Launched in 2010.

2 billion+ active daily users.

1.9 billion active daily users.

500 million+ stories shared daily.

Over 500 million accounts use Instagram stories every day.

Tips

- Share candid images, professional photos, and videos from events.
- Keep videos short to meet Instagram's 60-second limit.
- Use Instagram stories to share real-time updates from events, capital campaigns, and more with your followers.
- Stories are only visible for 24-hours, so save your stories as highlights on your profile so people can revisit them based on category or topic.
- Use Instagram's live video feature to connect with your followers in real time
- Save your videos and share them again later.
- Play with filters to change the look of your photos.

Content

- Post behind-the-scenes photos of events.
- Share photos, videos, and Instagram Reels from your organization's day-to-day activities on your stories.
- Have one of your outgoing staff members or volunteers go live and share to your stories from, an event or rally.
- Create "highlights" on your profile following big events.
- Feature your volunteers' work on-site in photos, videos, and on "stories."
- Promote events with in-feed posts featuring photos and videos and post a story with a link to your website to purchase tickets.
- Use Instagram Reels to share short testimonial videos from your followers about why they support your work.

*Sources: Instagram and Omnicores Agency

Twitter

Twitter connects users with world events, social causes, celebrities, and breaking news in real-time.

Tweets come in at breakneck speed. Keeping up is part of the attraction. Twitter allows you to post updates of up to 280 characters, though shorter tweets tend to perform better. The platform is a great source for what's trending in your community, and globally. Incorporate hashtags to engage with a particular group or add to a specific conversation. For an example of how a hashtag can boost your success rate, look no further than #GivingTuesday.

Profile*

Launched in 2006.

217 million monetizable daily active users.

500 million tweets daily.

Tweets with videos are six times more likely to be retweeted than tweets with photos and three times more than tweets with GIFs.

Tips

- Create a hashtag (#) for your organization and specific events, and encourage your followers to tweet using that hashtag.
- Retweet relevant content from reputable sources to inform your audience.
- Follow influencers in your field.
- Include your Twitter handle on your website and in all communications to build followers.
- Invite your e-newsletter subscribers to follow you on Twitter.
- Pin an important tweet to keep it at the top of your feed, so all visitors to your account will see it first.
- Reply to all tweets and direct messages within an hour (if not sooner).

Content

- Focus on text that is catchy and concise.
- Use videos and images for more engagement.
- Link to your website to drive traffic. Use a site like bitly to shorten links and save space.
- Similarly, use a site like bitly to shorten a link to your Network for Good donation page to drive support of your current campaign.
- Live-tweet an event such as a panel discussion, rally, or fundraising auction.
- Tag donors and volunteers in shout-outs

*Sources: Twitter and Omnicores Agency

LinkedIn

LinkedIn is the largest social media site for professional networking. You can post your business profile, connect to other organizations and peers, share blog articles and eBooks to increase your influence and build thought leadership, and search resumes for potential employees. For a small fee, you can also use LinkedIn's Volunteer Marketplace to recruit volunteers or even board members for your organization. On LinkedIn, frequency isn't as high a priority. Keep up a regular presence, but you don't have to post every day. Only share content that is relevant to your audience and adds to your position as an authority in your field.

Profile*

Launched in 2003.

810 million users.

310 million active monthly users.

LinkedIn posts with images get two times higher engagement and users are 20 times more likely to re-share posts with video.

Sources: Omnicores Agency*

YouTube

YouTube is the leading video-sharing site on the internet, hosting everything from movie trailers to music videos, livestream events, video blogs, classes and tutorials, cooking videos, town hall discussions, social movements, and political debates. Videos can be professionally shot or filmed on a smartphone, edited highlight reels or full-length events. Longer videos tend to perform better on the platform — we recommend at least five minutes. Users can upload, view, share, and comment on videos. Followers who like your content can subscribe to your channel. YouTube lets you tell your story, build awareness, and celebrate successes. Keywords help people find your videos when they search, and YouTube links are easy to embed and share on other sites.

Profile

Launched in 2005.

2.6 billion active monthly users.

122+ million active daily users.

1+ billion videos watched daily.

Sources: Omnicores Agency*

Engaging with Generation Z

According to Nonprofit Technology Enterprise Network (NTEN), Gen Z is known to be more socially conscious than some other generations, having grown up in the most diverse, tech-enabled environment to date. In fact, 96% of U.S. adults ages 18-29 own a smartphone. If you are interested in connecting with the Gen Z audience, whether that be to engage them as donors or provide your services, having an active social media presence is key. While Gen Z tends to take part in most social media channels available today, as of 2021, Snapchat was the top platform for this generation with 42 million Gen Z users and TikTok the second largest with 37 million Gen Z users. Both TikTok and Snapchat are great channels for nonprofits to promote their causes, plus you can highlight your organization's personality with more candid, authentic content. Consider the following to determine whether TikTok and Snapchat make sense for your organization and its goals:

Snapchat

Snapchat is a great way to reach a younger audience as 65% of 18 to 29-year-olds in the U.S. use the platform. As a photo and video messaging service, Snapchat allows users to send messages that can be viewed for 10 seconds or less before disappearing. Additionally, users can add geofilters, lenses, stickers, links, and locations to their posts; publish “stories” that can be viewed for up to 24 hours; and view public “stories” from other users and organizations.

Profile*

Launched in 2011.

319 million active daily users.

5+ billion snaps (photos and videos) created daily.

18 billion daily video views.

Tips

- Set up your Snapchat profile as a public profile so your “snap stories” will be discoverable across the platform.
- Look into purchasing a filter or lens for an upcoming event or to promote a cause. You can even customize the location or geofence where the filter will populate to reach your ideal audience. People love to engage with these filters, so it’s an easy way to promote your organization. Note: You cannot include your organization’s email address, phone number, or hashtag on filters.
- Feature your “Snapcode” on your website and event collateral to encourage people to follow your profile.

Content

- Snapchat is a great way to share more fun content with your supporters. Think outside the box to develop interesting content that illustrates your organization’s personality.
- Use filters and lenses when you post content. If you’re out and about in your city use other local filters to show your support for your community.
- Use the link feature to add your website URL to any snap you post.
- Utilize the polling and question features to engage with your audience and even collect feedback.
- Use the mention feature to tag people or organizations you may be working with. Anyone you tag can share to their own Snapchat profile to raise awareness.

*Sources: Omnicores Agency

TikTok

While TikTok may not be the first platform to come to mind when thinking about how to attract new supporters, it's an incredibly effective way to attract a younger demographic and reach a more diverse audience. The most downloaded app in 2020 with 850 million downloads, TikTok is currently available in 155 markets and in 75 languages. TikTok allows you to post short video clips featuring donation stickers, information about your nonprofit's purpose, links, and hashtags to reach your target audience. Users can also explore their "for you page" where the platform features content based on user preferences, likes, dislikes, and content they have engaged with in the past.

Profile*

Launched in 2016.

1.2 billion active monthly users.

$824.4 million in consumer spending on TikTok in Q4 2021.

About 43% of TikTok's global audience is 18-24 years old.

TikTok for good

TikTok for good:

The platform's TikTok for good initiative "wants to inspire and encourage a new generation to have a positive impact on the planet and those around them." Organizations utilize TikTok to promote their purpose, raise awareness for causes, engage with new supporters, and gain new donors. The platform offers account management to help you make the most of your presence on the app, advanced analytics to gauge the effectiveness of your content, and promoted hashtags to increase awareness for your cause. One example of a promoted hashtag is #forclimate, a partnership with International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies to spread climate change awareness. The campaign featured options to add special effects, filters, and stickers to users' videos sharing information about climate change. The campaign garnered 273,000 videos and 384 million views.

*Sources: Omnicores Agency

TikTok Continued

Tips

- Why are you joining TikTok? Determine if your target audience, whether that be donors or beneficiaries, is on the platform.
- Set up your profile as a nonprofit and help supporters find you by adding key details such as a bio, profile picture, and link to your website or a Network for Good donation page.
- Post frequently and experiment with different times of day and types of content to determine what works best for your organization.
- Target your content by interests, age, gender, location, and more to show up on the right users' "for you pages." Analyze your results and adjust accordingly.

Content

- Come up with a strategy for your TikTok profile. Focus on two or three main topics or themes (behind the scenes videos, education and statistics, volunteer or board testimonials, etc.) and share content based on those. The American Red Cross is a great example account to follow.
- Video content can vary from 15 seconds to up to 10 minutes, but the platform is best suited for bite-sized videos. Start off your videos with a hook to keep users engaged.
- Utilize TikTok's donation sticker feature to add a direct donation link to your videos and TikTok live streams. You can even ask key followers to include a donation sticker on their own videos to promote your campaign.
- Encourage key followers to add your nonprofit organization to their profile.
- Use trending sounds to push your content to the top of users' "for you pages."
- Videos are more likely to populate on users' "for you pages" if they feature people. Identifying a person to be the face of your account can increase exposure.
- Reach out to TikTok about opportunities to partner on promoted hashtags and campaigns to amplify your organization's purpose.
- Include three to four hashtags on your posts with a mix of hashtags relevant to your content and popular hashtags to boost visibility.

Social Advertising

With roughly 72% of Americans on social media, there's powerful competition to contend with in order to stand out in someone's newsfeed. Social media sites employ algorithms to try and show users the content that's most relevant to them. As a result, your organic reach is no longer enough to ensure you're being seen by as many followers and prospects as possible.

Strategic social advertising—or paid social— can maximize your organic social media reach. Whether your goal is to advertise events, sell merchandise, share special publications, or simply build organization and brand awareness; promoting engaging content on social media ensures your nonprofit stays at the forefront of people's minds. Unlike print ads or content marketing, which need time to yield results, social media advertising offers an immediate return on your investment. Which social media channel is your nonprofit most actively using to interact with your supporters? Whether you focus on Facebook for the largest amount of users, or distribute your advertising across your social media platforms, there is really no limit to how far your reach can go. Facebook and Instagram are the most popular sites to advertise on; while LinkedIn is good for identifying and targeting people by job title, company, industry, seniority, and more. You can promote an individual tweet, boost a specific Facebook post, or run a general awareness campaign to increase followers or website traffic.

Additionally, Facebook offers On-Facebook Donation Ads for nonprofits that also utilize Facebook Fundraising Tools. According to Facebook, this ad tool allows you to:

- Target two custom audiences, which can include supporters who have donated or hosted a fundraiser for your organization in the past.
- Track key metrics such as the number of on-Facebook donations, conversion value, and donation return on advertising spend (ROAS).

Learn more and how to set up On-Facebook Donation Ads.

Pricing varies across channels, and typically revolves around cost-per-click or cost-per-impression. A perk of social advertising is that sites allow you to set your budget for each campaign. For as little (or as much) as you want to spend, you can promote your organization, and reach a greater audience. Each platform offers the ability to choose your audience based on demographics, interests, or other filters. Select from a variety of photo and video ad formats, link your ad to a dedicated page on your website, and use the platform's ad reporting tools to track your results. Eye-catching images and videos see the best results. Linking to a specific, relevant page of your website simplifies the advertising process for your audience.

Engage Your Donors with Network For Good

Schedule a Demo Now

Social Advertising Tips

- Instagram is all about photos and video. Organizations that use eye-catching imagery in their ads have a higher engagement level. Make use of your event or community photos and videos in your next ad. Instagram's largest user group is 18–29 year-olds, making the site the perfect place to reach young professionals, students, and recent college graduates.
- Twitter fans love to engage with breaking news, social movements, political activism, business announcements, and of course, celebrities and influencers. Target your ad to capture those interests for best results.
- LinkedIn offers a choice between Sponsored Content, Sponsored InMail, and Text Ads; depending on if you want to be featured in a newsfeed or as a direct message.
- Facebook also lets you “boost” special posts and reach targeted audiences. Select from your followers; or target by location, demographics, or interests.

Social Media Strategy Checklist

Your social media strategy is the key to your engagement. What you post—and when—can be the difference between connecting with your followers and missing the mark entirely. Coordinating your message across social media channels amplifies your voice and impact in the community.

Assess Current Social Media Presence

Pro Tip: Ask a few members of your staff, board, and trusted volunteers to review your social media presence and give you feedback.

- ☐ What platforms are you on?
- ☐ How much do you know about your followers?
- ☐ How often do you post (daily, weekly, sporadically, etc)?
- ☐ How engaged are your followers (regular comments, likes but no comments, very quiet)?
- ☐ How welcoming (or stuffy) do you come across on each channel?
- ☐ How much traffic is social media driving to your website?
- ☐ How balanced is your content (promotion/advertising, thought-sharing, community engagement, fun)?

Branding Yourself

Pro Tip: Use a more casual voice on social media than on your website. Create one that can be carried over from social media site to site, but can be varied to match that particular audience. Some sites such as Snapchat and TikTok may be even more casual.

- ☐ What do you want your nonprofit organization's personality to be?
- ☐ Is your profile picture and name the same across platforms?
- ☐ Have you established a hashtag (or a few) for your organization?
- ☐ Are you sharing photos and videos on every site?
- ☐ Share these style guidelines with everyone who posts on your social media to build consistency.

Set Specific Goals

Pro Tip: Add a time frame to your goals to help track progress, measure success, and adjust future goals.

- ☐ Start posting on Facebook and Instagram (this could be on “stories” not in-feed) every day.
- ☐ Try out one new platform such as TikTok, Snapchat, LinkedIn, or YouTube to expand your reach to new demographics.
- ☐ Increase number of followers.
- ☐ Track interactions to increase follower engagement.
- ☐ Drive traffic to your website from social media.
- ☐ Acquire new subscribers to e-newsletter.

Create Content

Pro Tip: Plan out weeks or even months in advance so you don’t have to scramble to find something to post.

- ☐ Include date of post, time of day, and any photos, videos, or links to include. Consider adopting a social media management platform such as Hootsuite to make planning seamless.
- ☐ Repurpose content as needed for sharing across different social media platforms.
- ☐ Schedule time (and recruit coworkers) to create videos, blog posts, Q&As.
- ☐ Proofread everything and check your links.

Measure Success

Pro Tip: Use the analytic tools on each social media channel to track your results.

- ☐ Track both quantitative and qualitative outcomes.
- ☐ Are you on track to hit your monthly goal of increasing your number of followers?
- ☐ Engagement is about both quantity and quality. Are more followers commenting, sharing, or retweeting your posts? Are you being tagged in other posts? What posts had the most interaction? How can you recreate similar content?
- ☐ Is your content driving people to your website? Once there, are they subscribing to your e-newsletter or donating to your organization?